HISTORY

Penarth Yacht Club was established in 1880 as the Penarth Boat Club, but this name was changed to Penarth Yacht Club in 1895.

The earliest document giving a hint of the formation of a boat club at Penarth is a printed programme of 'Amateur Aquatic Sports' to be held at Penarth beach on 4th September 1880; the sports consisting of pleasure boat sailing, rowing, sculling, canoeing, swimming and a duck hunt.

The first building on the site of the present Club was a substantial boathouse, built of local stone by the RNLI in 1861 at a cost of £118 and remained in use until it was sold to Lord Windsor in 1884 so that it could be demolished and the original Esplanade built.

The Clubhouse as it exists today was built in three main stages; the northern wing, which contains the present two rowing boat houses, was first to be built, sometime before 1884. The second stage was added soon afterwards and the southern wing, extending from the main staircase, was completed in about 1896.

Early sailing boats were a mixed class of small craft - mainly half-decked and heavily ballasted. These were replaced by sloop rigged 'one raters' which, in turn, gave way to 'half-raters'—sloops with heavy centreboards. However, these boats could not withstand the weather sometimes experienced at the moorings off the Club and after a series of mishaps it was decided to adopt a class that could be hauled up into the boathouse.

The Mosquito class, designed and built locally by former Commodore Harold Clayton, was introduced in 1901. These craft were 15'9 long and at least twelve were owned by Club members. However, they were cumbersome to house after each race and a few years on they were replaced by the smaller, now more common Dinghy Class.

SAILING

As part of the Royal Yachting Association (RYA's) Discover and Rediscover Sailing Initiative Penarth Yacht Club is running a Discover Sailing programme at the club for 2025. This is aimed at encouraging people who have sailed previously and want to refresh or improve their skills, as well as those who have not sailed before but would like to try. ROWING

Penarth Rowing Club aim to launch a new Junior programme over the next few years.

Junior members, from the age of 13, can take part in training activities and theory based sessions to be held on a Monday evening at the Club.

Keep an eye out for more details as we have them.

The club has an active rowing section of all ages and welcomes new members to take part. Training takes place at Penarth on land and on the water on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings and Sunday mornings. Should the tide or sea condition be unfavourable for rowing, the club has alternative facilities at Barry Dock.
